Aura

Aura is a healthcare app designed to simplify how users find and book the right doctor. By combining an intuitive appointment flow with an AI assistant, users can tap on a body map to indicate pain and instantly see matched specialists. This experience reduces frustrating, removes medical guesswork, and helps users take action quickly and confidently.

Our Strategy

Reduced steps, Faster action

Clarity First

User Confidence

Transparency & Trust

AI Support

User Research

We conducted semi-structured interviews focused on participants' most recent doctor-booking experience. Participants were asked to walk through their journey from the moment they noticed symptoms to confirming an appointment. No designs or concepts were shown to avoid bias. This was followed by a survey to validate the interview findings.

Key findings from interviews

Users think in symptoms, not specialities

Location and near-term availability strongly influence decisions

Trust is built through clarity and guidance, not volume of information

Survey Findings

68%

felt unsure about the right doctor

57%

searched symptoms before selecting a provider

46%

abandoned or delayed booking due to unclear availability

42%

said guidance before booking would increase confidence

Pain Points

Uncertainty about the right doctor

Confusion around appointment types

Frustration with inaccurate availability

Lack of reassurance before booking

Research to design mappoing

Users start with symptoms

Users rely on proximity

Decision fatigue from too many options

Need for reassurance before booking

Symptom-based entry with AI Assistant

Interactive map for nearby doctors

Curated and filtered results

AI guidance before confirmation

I have pain in my right shoulder.

I'm sorry to hear that. Could you tell me a bit more about your pain; for example, when it started or what it feels like?

I'm not sure about the exact spot of my pain.

No problem. I'll show you a body map; you can tap where it hurts so I can better understand the location.

Go ahead and touch the area that feels painful. You'll have about 60 seconds to do it.
